

Searching for the Body's Physical Beauty

Larissa Frei is an artist who goes deeper, uncovering the secrets of the human body. In her work she searches for clues, allowing her to breakdown the secrets of its existence. Creative and technical implementation, which allows for it to be felt, with a soul too, making it a complete experience. Figurative expressions play with abstracts in which you can imagine the body in a pictorial space. She is in possession of a special talent, using color and lighting. For example, a blue, cloudy ground, combined with shimmers of yellow or red, so that the body becomes fragile and delicate like that of a woman. In other pictures the feminine body becomes ascertainable in all of its beauty, often turning its back to the viewer, disguising its face. In the three side by side women acts, you will also experience the back-side, beautifully painted so that the power and the movement, is understandable. In all of her nudes, for Larissa Katharina Frei it is not about the details, but rather making the body a part of the background, keeping much of the expression simply open, with slight hints, so they achieve a secretive, mysterious and moving touch. With these nudes you simply feel the desire of the artist, not just to create a beautiful body, but also a simultaneous and deep visual connection of the human existence.

The painting of nude women has something to do with music, as if you were searching for a certain rhythm with soft and hard tones or movement and stillness. Through this experience with her paintings, your memory will be stained with an everlasting image of women's nudes and life itself.